Item (6) County Council Employee Evaluation Process

Mr. Moss, Director of Human Resources for Greenville County, stated he had prepared a framework for performance reviews.

Agenda

- Performance Reviews: Traditional & New
- Job Descriptions
- Competencies
- Assessment Tool
- Assessment Process
- Questions

Mr. Moss stated the framework would address the purpose and function of performance evaluations, their relationship to job descriptions, competency-based job descriptions, assessment tools, and the evaluation process.

Performance Evaluation

Traditional Performance Reviews

- Check the Box
- One-Size-Fits-All
- Did you do X? Here's an Imperfect, Subjective Score.

New: Competency-Based Performance Reviews

- Behaviors + Skills + Abilities = Competencies
- The Competency is Rated, not the Task
- How You Do Your Job is as Important as What You Did

Mr. Moss stated the County's current performance evaluation process was limited in scope and did not adequately apply to high-level leadership. The process consisted of approximately 12 to 15 generic attributes that covered a broad scope of responsibilities but did not necessarily fit a particular position, resulting in a process focused on checking boxes rather than achieving the desired outcome. Mr. Moss proposed a competency-based performance review that would evaluate a combination of behaviors, skills, and abilities, focusing on how an employee performed the work in addition to what was accomplished.

Starting Point: Job Description

An Accurate Job Description:

- Tells Both What to do, and How We Expect it to be Done
- Sets Clear Expectations for Behavior
- Translates easily to a Performance Evaluation

Our Job Description Format:

- Role Purpose
- Statutory Responsibilities
- Competencies: Core, Functional, and Leadership
- Key (other) Responsibilities

Mr. Moss stated the process began with a job description that identified the role, purpose, statutory duties, competencies, and other essential functions, establishing clear behavioral expectations that translated into a performance evaluation tool.

The Competencies

Core

Communication
Problem Solving & Judgment
Accountability & Ownership
Integrity & Ethics
Initiative & Drive for Results

Functional

County-Wide Executive Leadership
Financial Management & Budgeting
Strategic & Capital Facilities Planning
Council & Intergovernmental Representation

Leadership

Decision Making
Vision & Strategic Alignment
Talent & Team Building
Delegation & Empowerment

Mr. Moss stated there were three kinds of competencies: core, functional, and leadership. Core competencies would apply to anyone in any department. There were actually eight core competencies, which could be tailored to fit a specific job.

Assessing Competencies

The Anchor = What We Expect ("the standard")

Competency	Anchor Statement
Integrity & Ethics	Shapes ethical standards and culture at an organizational level. Navigates complex ethical dilemmas with significant stakes. Is sought out as a trusted, principled voice in difficult situations.

Mr. Moss stated the importance of demonstrating integrity and ethical behavior, maintaining high standards, and serving as a principled voice when navigating ethical dilemmas. He noted that individuals who consistently demonstrated strong integrity and ethics were often sought out by others as a trusted voice of reason.

Assessing Competencies

The Anchor = What We Expect ("the standard")

Competency	Anchor Statement
Financial Management & Budgeting	Sets county-wide financial strategy, policy , and internal controls. Advises Council on complex financial or funding decisions . Represents the county in bond ratings, audits , or major financial negotiations.

Mr. Moss discussed the Financial Management and Budget competency, noting that it involved high-level responsibilities such as setting strategies, advising Council on complex financial matters and decisions, and representing the County in financial negotiations

Assessing Competencies

The Anchor = What We Expect ("the standard")

Competency	Anchor Statement
Vision & Strategic Alignment	Shapes organizational or function-level strategy . Aligns multiple teams around a shared vision . Anticipates strategic shifts and adapts direction proactively.

Mr. Moss discussed the Vision and Strategic Alignment competency, emphasizing the importance of shaping organizational strategy, aligning teams around a shared vision, communicating effectively, anticipating strategic shifts, and gaining organizational buy-in.

Rating Tool

Ratings were based on whether an individual met, exceeded, or failed to meet expectations. Mr. Moss stated comments could be included to provide clarity and explain the basis for the rating, particularly when expectations were not met or were exceeded.

The Overall Process

Mr. Moss outlined the evaluation process, explaining that each of the 12 Council members would independently complete an evaluation, with the option for the County Administrator to complete one as well. The evaluations would be submitted confidentially to a facilitator, who would compile the feedback and meet with Council to identify a common, overarching message.

Questions?

Mr. Moss opened the floor to the Council members for questions.

Chairwoman Pro Tem Seman expressed appreciation for the competency framework and noted the distinction between competencies shared across employees and the differences in how they were executed at higher levels. She asked how the competencies intersected with the review process for the County Administrator and individuals serving under contract.

Mr. Moss stated employees working under contract would be evaluated according to the performance expectations specifically outlined in their contracts. The competencies could be used to facilitate discussion of performance, but cautioned against directly tying the evaluation to an adverse outcome, as doing so could potentially place the County in breach of the contract.

Councilor McGahhey suggested discussing the matter openly and soliciting ideas regarding how the review process should be handled, including what type of facilitator should be engaged.

Mr. Moss stated he had several individuals in mind who could serve as facilitators, including someone with an academic background in human resources who was also a lawyer operating an LLC providing similar services. That individual was currently performing that type of work for Richland County. Mr. Moss stated because he reported to the County Administrator, it would not be appropriate for him to be involved in the review process, and he would be willing to assist in identifying a facilitator but would then step away from the process.

Councilor Tripp questioned whether the evaluations could be kept confidential and expressed concern the process could result in identifying individual comments.

Mr. Moss confirmed the evaluations would be kept confidential. He explained the 12 evaluation forms would be returned to the facilitator, who would compile the results for discussion. He stated the facilitator would guide an open discussion of the feedback without attributing specific comments to individual participants, allowing for a frank exchange of information while maintaining confidentiality.

Councilor Mitchell requested clarification regarding maintaining the confidentiality of the evaluation forms, emphasizing that identifying information, such as names or districts, should not be included and the comments should be carefully worded to preserve anonymity.

Mr. Moss agreed the evaluations should remain anonymous and stated the facilitator would be responsible for maintaining the confidentiality of the responses. He stated the facilitator would serve as the guardian of the information and recommended an individual of high integrity who could serve in that capacity. He stated, he had several peers in director-level roles in other counties who could serve as facilitators and perform the same function.

Chairwoman Pro Tem Seman suggested the next meeting could include an executive session and interviews with at least one of the potential candidates. She expressed support for using someone who was already performing that type of work in another county.

Chairman Blount asked whether the individuals could be invited to speak with the Council.

Mr. Moss stated he had already spoken with the individual, who confirmed he would be willing to assist and had performed similar work for another county.

Mr. Antley stated the next step was to identify one or more individuals to participate in an executive session Council could proceed with the session in accordance with the applicable procedures.

Chairwoman Pro Tem Seman stated no formal action was necessary and recommended Council's intent to address the matter be reflected on the agenda for the next meeting, with an action item included if the Council wished to proceed with interviews.

Councilor McGahhey sought confirmation that the matter would be placed on the agenda for the next meeting.

Councilor Shaw inquired whether the matter would require the County to follow the procurement process and suggested the HR Director obtain a cost estimate for the evaluator's services to help determine the applicable requirements

Mr. Lambrecht confirmed that he would be able to provide a cost estimate and stated it would be considered a professional service.

Item (7) Adjournment

Action: There being no further business, Chairwoman Pro Tem Seman moved to adjourn.

Motion carried, and the meeting was adjourned at 5:56 p.m.

Respectfully submitted:
