As a result, the first step in the process of creating a new culture is to identify the values and beliefs that are currently dominant in the organization. This involves conducting surveys and interviews with employees to understand their perspectives and attitudes towards various aspects of the organization. Once these values and beliefs are identified, they can be used as a starting point for developing a new set of values and beliefs that reflect the desired culture. This may involve making changes to the way decisions are made, the way work is organized, and the way employees are treated. It may also involve changing the way the organization interacts with its customers and stakeholders.
